BACKGROUND STORY / BIO:

Tiffany graduated from UC Berkeley with a B.A. in Cognitive Science and a Minor in Art. In college, she was active in her sorority and loved the constant energy and connection of campus life. After graduating, she joined a small startup as a UX designer, helping build the company's website. Though her life now feels stable, the routine has become monotonous. Most of her friends are from work, and her days blur together. She only really hangs out with her boyfriend, and often finds herself reminiscing about the "good old college days." She misses the sense of excitement and community she once had.

NEEDS, ASPIRATIONS, FEARS:

NEEDS: a new social circle
WANTS: the same kind of youthful, female friendships she had in college
ASPIRATIONS: grow in leadership, move up the corporate ladder, build a strong portfolio
FEARS: feeling stuck and living a boring life
PASSIONS: Corepower and baking

CURRENT EXPERIENCE:

works long hours, her job provides stability but feels repetitive and uninspiring. Most of her social life revolves around her boyfriend or coworkers, and she misses the energy, creativity, and female friendships she had in college. Though she's financially stable, she feels emotionally unfulfilled and disconnected from a larger sense of purpose.

CURRENT CHALLENGES:

- can't say no to her boss
- no work/life balance
- creatively stagnant
- stays inside too much

PAIN POINTS:

- Feels her life has become monotonous and lacks excitement.
- Struggles to find like-minded friends outside of work.
- Feels pressure to achieve constant career growth while neglecting personal fulfillment.
- Misses the sense of belonging and purpose she had as part of campus organizations.

KEY USER QUOTE:

"I thought once I had a stable job and a nice apartment, I'd finally feel content. But instead, everything just feels... muted. Like I'm living life in grayscale. Is this really all what life has to offer?"
